

HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE FOR RAJASTHAN BENCH AT JAIPUR

IN RE:

DIGNITY, RESPECT & HONOUR OF GIRLS AND WOMEN

JUSTICE ANOOP KUMAR DHAND ORDER

03.12.2024

Reportable

By the Court:

1. Verse 3.56 of Manusmriti says:-

"yatra nāryastu pūjyante ramante tatra devatāḥ yatraitāstu na pūjyante sarvāstatrāphalāḥ kriyāḥ"

(Means: Where women are given due respect, even Gods like to reside there.)

2. The Right to Dignity and Decency ensure that every women is treated with respect and honour. This right protects women from any kind of harassment, abuse or violence that undermine their dignity. It is vital to create an environment where women can live and work without fear of discrimination and degradation.

3. Every women should live a life of respect, equality and decency, free from any kind of fear, force, violence and discrimination. According to Article 21 of the Constitution of India, every citizen, including women is entitled to the right to life and dignity.

4. Women are the backbone for any progressive nation. Ancient literature like Vedas, Brahmana, Upanishad, Grihya Sutra, Dharmasastra and Epics, Smritis and Puranas have placed women with utmost respect and integrity. Earlier civilization evidence emphasised the status of women were at par with the men. In long-standing history of India, women always catered key role in the history of mankind.

5. In the era of globalization, when the civilization has reached into the 21st century and the status of women is still being defined by patriarchy society, the women are still fighting and finding to have a place in the society. There are various road-blocks that women, still in modern times, do face on daily basis these includes poor health, lack of washrooms and unhygienic environment in public and working places.

6. In spite of having several schemes, the Central as well as the State Governments have failed to discharge their duties in providing better facilities of building public toilets and distribution of sanitary napkins to the women, walking on the streets and working at their workplaces.

7. Lack of facilities, i.e., toilets for women, which is a basic necessity, can lead to several health issues to women.

8. Due to lack of toilet facilities for women or where toilets exist, but they lack in cleanliness, sanitation and hygiene, women tend to 'hold on' and defer urination until they can find a clean public toilet or till they reach home. Infact, at times, women do not drink water, when required to step out, with the fear that she may not have access to a clean and safe toilet. Medical science has shown that urinary tract infections, problems of distended bladders, and a range of other uro-gynecological problems are a consequence of deferring urination. For example, the chances of toxic shock from internal sanitary protection is increased, if there are no toilets available to change sanitary napkins/tampons when women are away from home. The long term effects of controlling the bladder is a matter which is medically recognized all over the world.

9. It is pertinent to note, that various studies and research have been conducted all over the world with respect to the issue in hand and all have emphasized the need for public toilets for women. The problems faced by women walking on the streets vis-a-vis toilets are universal. Public toilets used by women have to be user-friendly, sustainable, safe, clean, hygienic and children/senior citizens/disabled friendly. Toilet issues affect all 'users', but more particularly women, who comprise approximately 50% of the population. Men in general, have twice as much provision compared to women, as they have urinals, closets and a greater number of gents toilet blocks overall. The necessity for women to visit toilets is more and for a greater range of reasons, essentially because of biological differences. Women when they are out on the streets during the day, in connection with work, for shopping, or for carrying out other essential tasks, may find themselves without the benefit of a convenient place to visit a washroom/rest room/toilet, when they need 'to go' while away from home. The facilities as are available to women walking on the street are almost negligible and in no way proportionate to the existing facilities vis-a-vis the women population. Not only are the basic infrastructure/facilities lacking, but even those provided are far from satisfactory. Infact, they are sub-standard. The toilet problems are further aggravated because of inappropriate locations, bad design, poor maintenance and management of existing facilities, lack of toilet attendants, water, electricity, security, safety, cleanliness and hygiene, etc. Limited opening hours, unequal distribution and inappropriate location of facilities result in people declaring 'there's never a public toilet when you want one'. Further, for a range of cultural, practical and safety reasons, women are less likely than men to go to unknown places to use a toilet. Working women often combine childcare and homemaking with work outside the home. This may result in different travel patterns. For example, for many women the 'journey to work' is not a single-destination trip but may consist of 'several stopovers' as they travel from home, to the childcare centres or to the school to drop the children, then to the office and on return, to child care centre/school/shops before returning home. There may be women who go out for field work in connection with their job, for a walk to a park/promenade; there may be women who go out to the market for their daily chores, women who take children to playground/parks, women who travel by buses/trains, etc. Women in general require toilets, including a greater number at different locations, which are frequented.

10. Clean public toilets contribute to the health and well being of the society. Need for clean toilets for women walking on the street cannot be ignored. The need for women toilets /washrooms / restrooms is felt even more acutely, during menstruation, when it is difficult to anticipate when it will be time to change a sanitary napkin (tampon or pad), resulting in frequent trips to the washroom. In addition, women often act as primary caregivers to the elderly, disabled, infirm and children, which may again require them to make supplementary trips to the restroom.

11. This Court may note here with anguish, that something which is the duty of the State Government and the local authorities to provide, is not provided, resulting in publication of following news item in news-paper 'Rajasthan Patrika' Jaipur

टॉयलेट एक शर्म कथा : घर से बाहर या फील्ड पर पानी पीने से परहेज टॉयलेट जाने के डर से कामकाजी महिलाएं कम पी रही पानी

जयपुर. घर-घर टॉयलेट का जबरदस्त अभियान चल रहा है, लेकिन प्रदेश में अधिकतर दफ्तरों-थानों-स्कूलों में कामकाजी महिलाएं टॉयलेट की कमी या फिर अव्यवस्थाओं से शर्मसार हो रही हैं। देश-दुनिया के कई अध्ययन कहते हैं कि घरलू या कामकाजी महिलाएं जब भी घर से बाहर निकलती हैं तो पानी नहीं पीती। उन्हें डर रहता है कि अगर लघुशंका आ गई तो मुश्किल होगी... कहां जाएंगे? यह बात सिर्फ सर्वे की नहीं हमारे आपके घर की भी है।

मेडिकल साइंस जर्नल में प्रकाशित एक खबर में साफ है कि बच्चे पैदा करने के बाद या फिर बढ़ती उम्र में महिलाओं को लघुशंका ज्यादा आती है और उन्हें रोकने में भी दिक्कत होती है। बात अगर प्रदेश की करें तो यहां करीब 56 हजार सरकारी कार्यालयों में 10 लाख अधिकारी-कर्मचारी हैं।

The need to go to the toilet is completely natural, so that the body can eliminate and flush out all the excess and waste product that it does not need. An average bladder can hold more than two cups of urine/liquid and holding the bladder for a long period of time can stretch the bladder. Medically, the automatic feedback mechanism in the bladder sends a signal to the brain when it is full, which would then require the person to go to the nearest toilet. If for want of toilets, a woman is prevented from going to the toilet, the body loses its ability to know when it is time to go to the toilet. Apart from the same, the consequence of not going to the toilet and controlling the bladder results in urinary tract infection, kidney stone, interstitial cystitis and swelling of the bladder. Consuming liquids is an important function for the human body, by which kidneys are cleaned and hence, regular expulsion of urine is essential to ensure that no residues, which the body does not require, are left in the body, leading to a host of other health problems.

12. The World Health Organization (WHO) of which India is a member, considers health of human beings, regardless of age, gender, socioeconomic/ethnic background as the most basic and essential asset. The preamble of the Constitution of the WHO, defines health as "a state of complete, physical, mental and social well being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity". The preamble further states that "the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being, without distinction of race, religion, political belief, economic or social condition". The 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights also guarantees the right to a standard of living adequate for health and well being (Article 25). The right to health was again recognized as a human right in the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (Article 12). 19th November is celebrated as a World Toilet Day and India is also a member of the World Toilet Organization, which was established with the aim of breaking the taboo around toilets and to address the sanitation crisis and for improving toilets worldwide. Since 2001, the Organization has lobbied Governments, public and private stakeholders, etc. to prioritize sanitation in the development agenda. The right to health is relevant to all States. India has ratified the International Human Rights treaty recognizing the right to health. Thus, the right to health is an inclusive right and the underlying determinants of health amongst other things includes adequate sanitation. The Apex Court has held in several cases that the right to life enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution of India cannot be restricted to mere animal existence and it means something more than just physical survival. Right to live with human dignity is a fundamental right of every Indian citizen and includes the bare necessities. Article 47 of the Constitution of India casts a paramount duty on the State to take all the necessary steps to improve public health as among its primary duties. Similarly, as noted earlier, statutory duty/obligations are also cast on the Municipal Corporations/ Councils/ Boards under the Rajasthan Municipalities Act, 2009 (for short 'Act of 2009'). Thus, what is evident is that the legislature has contemplated through these provisions, almost all that would be required to be performed by the State Governments and Municipal Corporations, in order to achieve the fulfillment of the fundamental right of a dignified human life. Simple and basic but of vital importance are public toilets, which are as critical as any large infrastructure project to make cities livable.

13. Women have the right to have safe and clean toilets at all convenient places, which in a way impacts their right to live with human dignity. One of the paramount duty of the State and the Corporations is to improve public health by providing toilets for women at all convenient places. The lack of toilets for women walking on the streets and public places is evident from the above news item.

14. Taking a serious note of the situation, this Court treat the newspaper report as a suo motu writ petition and direct the Registry to treat the newspaper report published in the Rajasthan Patrika Newspaper as a Public Interest Litigation titled as:-

Suo Motu: In the matter of Dignity, Respect & Honour
Girls and Women.
